GALWAYDAILY

Introduction

The Covid-19 crisis has left many restaurants, takeaways, café etc, operating at reduced hours or with severely limited services, putting incredible strain on businesses that remain open. At the same time, getting some takeout food has become one of the few indulgences that remains available to people in lockdown.

To help support the hospitality sector in Galway we at Galway Daily are launching a new service, free for food businesses in Galway, or those on the county border which still serve people here. This interactive restaurants page will help food businesses and their customers connect, enabling you to let customers know what services are still available, and enabling people to see what delivery and collection services are open near them.

How it works

In a quick, ten minute process businesses simply upload their details and a brief description of themselves to a form which we will link in order to create a listing on our website. This will create a directory page for businesses telling customers what food they have to offer, and what business hours/services are still available. It will also display your business on an interactive map for people to easily see and support local businesses.

Information Needed:

- Business name
- Address & Eircode
- Contact Details - Phone number, website link, JustEat link, VouchFor link.
- Opening hours - These should reflect current service hours, not regular business hours
- Brief Description - Approx 100 words about your business e.g History, menu favourites, character. (Should also include what collection/delivery services are currently available)
- Pictures - Of your business and/or food. Max 5 pictures with a minimum width of 500px.

If you are a restaurant/takeaway/café owner with more than one outlet which you want listed, or if you have any inquiries, then you will need to get in touch with our team. To contact us, please email: darragh@galwaydaily.com
